

Rollins Center for Language & Literacy

A READ GUIDE For Families with Infants

Created by the Rollins Center for Language & Literacy at the Atlanta Speech School

In the Garden

Author: Elizabeth Spurr; Illustrator: Manelle Oliphant

R Repeat the Book

First Read (push in events): Look at the cover, read the title and say, “I wonder what this boy is doing? Let’s read and find out.” As you read, explain any words your child may not understand like dirt, happy, boy, tree, leaves, rain, & plant. Have fun acting out words like dig, pat, rain, grow, pick, & happy. With infants, you may want to gently take their hands and help them act out those words, too. Point out things in the illustrations to help support learning the vocabulary. During the first read, focus on what is happening in the story (the events). After finishing the first read, ask the question suggested in the A (Ask Questions) section of this guide, and model the answer for your baby.

Second Read (push in thoughts and emotions): Before reading, say, “Remember this boy who was digging? I wonder where he is digging? Let’s read and find out.” Follow the same procedure as the first read with the vocabulary, but focus on thoughts and emotions, or feelings, of the characters during this read. Say things like, “He must be really happy to see those leaves growing.” Speak from the character’s point of view now and then, saying, “I bet he’s thinking, “Oh, no! Those seeds are taking forever to grow!” With infants, you may want to help them point to pictures, turn pages, and copy gestures you make while reading (ex: patting hands together as if brushing off dirt to talk about the dirt, or reaching hands up high when you talk about growing). After finishing the read, ask the question for the second read given in the A (Ask Questions) section of this guide, and model the answer for your baby.

Third Read (read to pull language): Before reading, look at the cover, and say, “Remember the boy who was digging in the dirt? I wonder what finally grew there? Let’s talk about it and find out.” As you go through the book, instead of reading all the words, encourage your baby to participate as much as possible on each page by touching pictures, pointing to pictures, imitating your gestures and sound effects, and turning pages for you. Ask the question for the third read after you finish, and model the answer for your baby.

E Engage and Enjoy

In addition to acting out words as described in the first read, use different voices for the different characters when you read. Encourage your child to act out things in the story with you, and take their hands and gently help them act out gestures as you read the story if they need support. For example, you might say, “Look at the rain. It’s raining!” while making your fingers wiggle like falling rain from high to low, and then help your child imitate that action, while saying, “rain!” and pointing at the rain in the book.

A Ask Questions

Remember that the talk surrounding the book is the most important thing. Encourage interaction during each story reading time by asking these questions at the end of each read:

After Read 1, ask: “What is the boy doing here (on the cover)? (digging; help baby act out digging gesture.)

After Read 2, ask: “I wonder how the boy felt when he saw the sprouts growing.” (happy; help baby act out happy face)

After Read 3, ask: “What grew?” (on p.17) (plants/leaves grew; help baby point to leaves/plants.)

D Do More with the Book

Continue the fun of the story by choosing some of the activities on the back to do with your baby.

Do More with the Book!

Activities for Families with Infants for “In the Garden”

- Take your baby outside on a nature walk. Stop and point out trees, leaves, dirt, water, plants, and the sun as you see them, and say things like, “We just read our book about dirt and leaves. These leaves are just like in our book!”
- For older infants, allow them to use an old measuring cup to dig in the dirt outside with your help. Point to the dirt as you talk about it, and repeat the word dig as you dig, pairing the word with an action. Use the same gestures you used when reading the book to talk about digging and dirt (brushing hands together as if brushing dirt off of them), and encourage your child to copy those gestures, too.
- At bath time, point out the water, and use a small cup to pour the water and let your baby watch it trickle. Repeat the word water as you pour it back into the tub each time, and make the words musical as you say them. For example, “Look, it’s water! Water! Here comes the water! Water!”
- If you have plants inside or outside your home, bring your baby with you as you water the plants. Describe what you are doing. Narrate your actions. You might say, “These plants are getting dry. They need some water. I think I’ll fill up this pail and water them. Look, here comes the water! Plants love that water! It helps them grow!” Try to be an everyday sportscaster for your baby, to help them make sense of the world.
- As you are changing your baby’s diaper, talk about how they are growing. Stretch an arm up high as you say the word “grow” to help your baby understand that to grow is to get bigger. As you get your baby cleaned and dressed, talk about each part of her body that has grown. For instance, you could say: “Your legs have grown and are getting so long! Your arms have grown, and now you can reach my nose!”
- At the grocery store, point out the leaves and plants you see in the produce section. Talk about the names and textures of all the different foods that grow in nature, such as: “Wow, those strawberries smell so sweet! They are bright red and look so bumpy! And look at the leaves on the top of each one. Those are tiny little leaves!”
- In the car, as you drive, talk about whether it is sunny or rainy or cloudy. Talk about how the sun makes us feel warm, and rain cools us off. Talk about how sometimes we need shades or sunglasses, because the sun can be too bright for our eyes in the car sometimes. Talk about how the sun helps plants grow and is up high in the sky.
- As your baby nurses or drinks milk, sing a soothing song that relates to this book, such as “You are my Sunshine” or “Oh Mr. Sun.” Here are the lyrics:
*Oh Mr. Sun, Sun, Mr. Golden Sun, Please shine down on me.
Oh Mr. Sun, Sun, Mr. Golden Sun, Hiding behind the tree?
These little children are asking you, to please come out so we can play with you.
Oh Mr. Sun, Sun, Mr. Golden Sun, Please shine down on me.*
- If your baby is old enough to eat baby foods, during meal and snack times, describe the foods he is eating and how those foods grow. Talk about how bananas grow on trees and are yellow, and we have to peel them and mash them up to get banana baby food. Talk about how rice grows in water and is a grain, and we have to boil it in water to make it soft enough to eat. Talk about how peas grow in pods, and we have to take them out of their shells and mash them up so that babies can eat them.
- Read your baby other books related to this one. For example, you could read: “Baby Loves Spring” by Karen Katz, “The Very Hungry Caterpillar” by Eric Carle, “Grow Up” by Nina Laden, or “Big Little” by Leslie Patricelli.
- While your baby is sitting on your lap, play the “So big” game. Ask your baby, “How big are you?” Then, help your baby spread her arms out wide and say, “So big!” in a musical voice. Repeat this game over and over, and your baby will soon learn to open her arms wide and make you laugh. Then, talk about how your baby is growing, and getting so big.
- Sing the “Itsy Bitsy Spider” with your baby while he is having “tummy time” on your chest or on a blanket on the floor. This will give your baby more chances to hear the words “rain” and “sun” in another situation besides the “In the Garden” book, which will help them understand the words better and better. The words are: The itsy bitsy spider went up the water spout. Down came the rain and washed the spider out. Up came the sun and dried up all the rain, so the itsy bitsy spider went up the spout again.

The Rollins Center for Language & Literacy at the Atlanta Speech School is committed to providing teachers and school leaders professional development in research-based strategies to foster the language and literacy skills of young children.

This material is copyright protected by the Rollins Center for Language & Literacy at the Atlanta Speech School. Please reproduce for use with teachers, leaders, and parents. For more information, contact the Rollins Center at Rollinsinfo@AtlantaSpeechSchool.org.